Information about your Hydrogen Breath Test

Your doctor has requested a hydrogen breath test. This is a test that uses the measurement of hydrogen in the breath to diagnose several conditions that cause gastrointestinal symptoms.

With any medical test it is important that other factors do not interfere with your test results. Please read the following information carefully.

You should have nothing to eat or drink from midnight prior to attending the Medical Elective Services (MES). It is also vital to your test results that you do not smoke on the morning of your test.

Once you have been admitted onto MES, you will be asked to rinse your mouth out with water. You will then be asked to breathe slowly into a machine. This is your baseline reading. You will be given a glucose or lactose drink, depending on the test required, after which you will continue to breathe into the machine at half hourly intervals, for two and a half hours.

You should tell a member of staff if you develop any symptoms, for instance nausea, bloating or diarrhoea.

The test is then complete and you will be offered something to eat and drink.

Your doctor will tell you the results of the test at a later date.

Our Trust is committed to teaching, training and research to support the development of health and healthcare in our community. Healthcare students may observe consultations for this purpose. You can opt out if you do not want students to observe. We may also ask you if you would like to be involved in our research.
