The results from your hysterectomy have confirmed that you have had a very early stage cancer of the womb lining (endometrium). Examination in the laboratory has confirmed that the cancer involved only the lining of the womb, with no spread into the deeper muscle of the womb or to the other specimens that were removed at the time of surgery.

You do not require any further treatment and it is unlikely that the cancer will return.
What about follow up?

Some patients get anxious about follow up appointments and there is very little scientific evidence to suggest that regular follow up appointments are beneficial or necessary in very early stage cancers. Some research has observed that if endometrial cancer comes back (also known as recurrence), many patients will notice symptoms first, rather than it being picked up at follow-up appointments. In addition, patients on regular follow up might sometimes delay reporting their symptoms until their next planned clinic visit.

Approximately three to four weeks after your surgery, you will visit the clinic for a check-up and to discuss the results from your hysterectomy. Following this, an appointment in the “End of Treatment Clinic” will be made where you will see one of the Gynaecology Cancer Nurse Specialists.

After this visit you will be discharged from the clinic and begin “Patient Initiated Follow-up”, in which you do not attend for regular hospital appointments. You can be referred urgently by the Gynaecology Cancer Nurse Specialist for hospital review at any time in the future if there are concerning symptoms or signs related to your cancer. This ensures that you have hospital appointments only when you need them.
What are the signs or symptoms to look out for?

You should look out for:

- Vaginal bleeding or spotting
- Unusual vaginal discharge
- Significant unintended weight loss or loss of appetite
- Persistent pelvic pain
- Difficulty or painful urination
- Altered bowel habit or nausea
- Abdominal bloating
- Swelling of the legs
- Persistent dry cough or breathlessness

If you experience these symptoms and they persist over a period of time (especially if they are new or worsening) it could be associated with recurrent cancer of the womb and should be investigated further. Please note, however, that commonly these symptoms are related to less serious conditions.
What should I do if I experience any of these symptoms?

If you experience any of the listed symptoms your first port of contact should be the Gynaecology Clinical Nurse Specialists by telephone (01904 726478) who will be able to advise you and arrange further assessment as required.

If there is cause for concern, an urgent “fast-track” specialist review in the gynaecology clinic will be arranged and an appointment sent to you as soon as possible.
