Who are the Macmillan Urology Clinical Nurse Specialists and what is their role?

These are nurses who specialise in the care and support of people with a suspected or proven urological cancer. They may also be referred to as your Key Worker.

A Clinical Nurse Specialist (CNS) is available to every patient diagnosed with a urological cancer. Many people will be involved in your care, and they form the Multi-Disciplinary Team (MDT). Your Key Worker is the link between you and the MDT throughout your treatment.

The Key Worker is there to support you at every stage of your disease including:

- Diagnosis
- During treatment
- After treatment
- Recurrence of your cancer

How can my CNS help me?

Your CNS can support you, your relatives and carers by providing information about tests and investigations, current illness and possible treatments. They can offer advice and support about side-effects related to your treatment and how best to manage them.

Your Clinical Nurse Specialist can also undertake a 'Holistic Needs Assessment' to better understand your individual needs and help to create a 'Care Plan' for you.

If you have any concerns relating to your diagnosis, treatment and aftercare please contact your Clinical Nurse Specialist.

Some of your treatment may be in another hospital, for example at Leeds or in Hull. Once you have been discharged from there, you can still contact your clinical Nurse Specialist at York if you require advice or support.

What can my CNS offer me help with?

Your nurse specialist can offer advice on:

- Psychological and emotional issues
- Changes in body image
- Sexual issues and relationships
- Social care and community support

Management of the symptoms of your illness and side-effects caused by your treatments; including surgery, radiotherapy, hormone treatments, chemotherapy and bladder washouts.

They can also refer to other services including:

- Benefits and financial support
- Cancer Psychology
- Complementary Therapies
- Lymphoedema Service
- District Nurses
- Community Macmillan Nurses
- Support Groups.
